My dear Mr Chapman

Knowing how very much your time is engaged I will only briefly state that our contributions this year are very far short of what they would have been, in consequence of the distress amongst our working people - we have on the cover of each parcel marked the prices at about half the or up to half the price they ought to bring - My sister Isabel is in England - Our contributions would have been more of Frederick

Can Councillor Jennings call in person at any convenient hour to receive the parcel?

Douglass and Mr. Garrison had come as we hoped — we have been much disappointed at not seeing
Mr. Garrison — Frederick Douglass has given us a hope of visiting York before he returns to America during the three weeks that he spent with us he won our united affection and esteem, we felt towards him more as if he were our brother — he has made many warm and attached friends in this city — and now my dear Miss Chapman excuse this brief note but I feel I ought not to trespass on your valuable time — with you give our kind regards to Mr Richmond he is not forgotten — we are now going to have a bazaar for the relief of our poor — we feel that the failure of the potatoe crop will be for good in the end as potatoes are not good food to live entirely upon — at present the poor have to pay equal to 28 cents for

of the yellow Indian meal - I often think that if we had more faith we would practically feel that all things work together for good - even slavery I think will be found to have done a certain good - In my Sunday class a few Sundays since we were conversing upon this subject and I remarked that in after ages
passed away - the biography of the great and good men & women who have devoted their lives to hasten the redemp of this fallen creature - will do a greater good to millions yet unborn than slavery has done of evil - & even this note I began resolved only to write a few lines - We hope the contribution for next year will not be so few - yours with affection regard & esteem Jane S
